

And offered to you all such a loving big hand
Whilst tropical singing birds rested upon me
My skin in parts so lush and green, you see
I often listened to the soft beat of the rain
And observed my wild animals prowl their domain
I heard the cheerful humming bird song
As I spun on my axis all day long
The birds were my spies, telling all that they heard
From the toucan to the hornbill to the humming bird
All creatures great and small live within me
All different in ways unable for you to see
My life had once been as I say but now it's not
Due to climate change with a devious plot
It destroys me acre by acre, day by day
Nothing is strong enough to ^{STAND} in its way
It won't listen to reason, it's stubborn as a mule
What took years to develop is destroyed by the fuel
By the rate it is changing nothing will be left
For you see, to me it's a major threat
This tragedy now which has befallen me
Means that one day in the future I will cease to be
